APICULTURE

Definition –

Apiculture is the art and science of rearing & managing honey bees in artificial hives for the production of honey, beeswax & other useful products.

Introduction –

Apiculture is the scientific management & rearing of honey bees in specially designed bee colonies or hives for obtaining useful production such as honey & beeswax. Also provides pollination service.

Economic Importance –

- Honey production – Honey is an important food and commercial product.
- Beeswax production – Used in candles, cosmetics, medicines and polishes.
- Pollination – Honey bees improve pollination & can increase the yield & quality many crops.
- Employment and income – Beekeeping provides an additional source of income, especially in rural areas.
- Industrial products – Bee products such as propolis, royal jelly and bee venom have commercial applications.
- Supports agriculture – Beekeeping contributes to agricultural productivity and sustainables rural development.
- Export potential – Honey and other bee products can be commercially traded and exported.

SERICULTURE

Definition –

Sericulture is the scientific practice of rearing silkworms for the production of silk

Introduction –

Sericulture is the rearing of silkworm for the production of silk. It involves the cultivation of suitable food plants, rearing of silkworms, harvesting of cocoons and obtaining silk fibres from them. Silk is a valuable natural fibres widely used in the textile industry.

Economic Importance –

- Silk Production – Provides a valuable natural fibre for the textile industry.
- Income generation – Provides an important source of income for farmers and rearers.
- Employment – Creates employment in rural and semi – rural areas.
- Supports textile industries – Silk is used for sarees, garments, fabrics and other products.
- Supports agriculture – Mulberry cultivation provides and additional agriculture activity.
- Export earnings – Silk and silk products have commercial and export value.
- Rural development – Supports small – scale and cottage industries.

PEARL CULTURE

Definition –

Pearl culture is the artificial cultivation of pearl – producing oysters or mussels for the production of pearls.

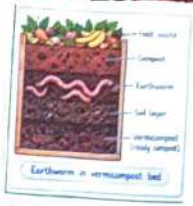
Introduction –

Pearl culture is the cultivation of pearl – producing oysters or mussels under controlled conditions for the production of pearls. It involves selecting healthy oysters, inter a suitable nucleus, maintaining them in water, and harvesting the pearls (after they are formed.

Economic Importance –

- Pearl production – Pearls are valuable commercial products.
- Jewellery industry – Used in necklaces, earrings, rings and other ornaments.
- Income generation – Provides income to pearl farmers.
- Employment – Creates employment in pearl farming, processing and jewellery making.
- Export value – Pearls and pearl products have good commercial value.
- Supports coastal communities – Provides livelihood opportunities in coastal areas.
- Other products – Pearl material has applications in cosmetics and decorative products.

VERMICULTURE



Definition –

Vermiculture is the scientific practice of rearing and maintaining earthworms for the production of vermicompost and other useful products.

Introduction –

Vermiculture is the rearing and management of earthworms under controlled conditions to convert organic waste into nutrient – rich vermicompost.

Earthworms break down biodegradable materials and help in producing a useful organic manure.

Economic Importance –

- Organic manure – Vermicompost improves soil fertility and provides nutrients to plants.
- Waste management – Converts biodegradable household and agriculture waste into useful manure.
- Income generation – Vermicompost production can provide an additional source of income.
- Employment – Creates opportunities for small – scale and rural enterprises.
- Agriculture – Supports sustainable and organic farming practices.
- Plant Production – Vermicompost is useful for crops, gardens and nurseries.
- Environmental benefit – Helps reduce organic waste and promotion recycling by biodegradable materials.

Activity Report

TheDepartment of Zoology was held Wall Poster Publicationon dated 17/09/2026, at 08.35 am. on the Notice board of Department of Zoology. The Wall poster was inaugurated at the auspicious hands of Hon. Principal GangadharRathod (Secretary of the Institution), The program was graced by Principal Dr. Devidas Kendre, Head Dr. Shrinivas Pawar, Dr. Mahesh Pentewar, Dr. Ramkrushna Badne.

The Department of Zoology organized an educational Wall Poster Publication on "Animal Resources & Economy" to create awareness among students regarding the importance of animal-based resources and their contribution to rural economy, employment generation and sustainable development.The poster was prepared and displayed by the students under the guidance of the faculty members of the Department of Zoology. The activity focused on four important areas of applied zoology: Apiculture, Sericulture, Pearl Culture and Vermiculture.

Students collected relevant information from textbooks and other resources and prepared an attractive educational wall poster. Diagrams, illustrations and concise scientific information were used to make the concepts easy to understand. The completed poster was displayed in the college for academic awareness and student learning.

Outcome of the Activity

The activity provided students with practical exposure to applied and economic zoology. It encouraged them to explore animal-resource-based activities as potential avenues for employment, entrepreneurship and sustainable rural development. The wall poster also served as an informative academic display for students visiting the department.

Conclusion

The Wall Poster Presentation on "Animal Resources & Economy" was an informative and student-oriented academic activity organized by the Department of Zoology.
